

Let's Have A Relay 2026
I Ring

I:1 Miles – Chiilúú

Chupuu chúúhu ketíí pííne Xipúúpá púnáá Sichuu yeng xoonchimáá áánu suwamáá ráákéésu mééhi. Ráákéésu kim má púnáá Méhuníí xaa Súúsichi, sichi háyu ráákéésu.

Chupuu kúú ketíí úúhi chúúhu hóóxa chúúmáá iichoó púnáá óóngáá yeng sichi ííha sixúúm kúú ííchu sichi háyu pííshímu. Máácha kuúshi kúú xáá chawúú ííchú xúúfó chóochúúm nii áánu cháyu tsiifaamáá.

Súútu Chupuu oonyáá chá ííchú ínsha mooxúú chiim kaa háyu shichá. Cháyu kiyaa mishaa mooxúú sááhu úúhi kiilú oonyáá chá ííchú Chupuu kîxáá áánu tsáá chá púnáá uu'oláá.

Kú tsáá yeng kiyaa su Chupuu ketíí cháhí ííchú uu'oxíí. Chá mishaa nitá yeng kiyaa úúhi chăchí Chupuu háyu tsipí. Xiichiítée kááng tsiim róó ííchú uu'oxíí.

Kiyaa xáá xáá chăchí púnáá Chupuu háyu sipí yeng ínsha púnáá kú mooxúú la háyu lúúxaá kúú. Kóotaa Chupuu háyu sipí úúhi ketíí ixuu chikíí Chupuu cháhí úúhi nitá yeng hutiímáá úúhi pi ííchú ínsha.

Máácha kuúshi háyu sííyáá mééhi mishaa ííha leewúú nitámáá úúhi pííne yúúmhe kúmimáá íchu kúsa yáli íchu kúú. Hutií kú cháwuu súusan wikáá úúhi kaatoo pí. Kóotaa kú cháhí yaa ííchu uu'oxíí chikíí úúhi pííne kúmimáá kúsa yáli kúú háyu cha púnáá xoonchimáá xiichií kúsa fu tsayú kú kúú táá xóónchi.

Hutií níchíífo má wikáá xoonchimáá má ketíí chelá ííha hóóxa chupuu chúúhu. Máácha kuúshi háyu sííyáá kúú chúú iichoó xoonchimáá má ixuu kú chii chupuu kúú, háyu póo chátée iráá ketíí chúú iichoó saa Súúsichi.

The drowned dove flower is native to Xip'uupát and used to honor some deities, especially Súósichí, the freshwater deity.

At freshwater temples, doves were drowned into a basin of freshwater from the rivers as a sacrifice to Súósichí. On large holidays, villages celebrate around the fire pit and socialize.

One member, Shupúú, sat close to the fire to stay warm and kept to themself. Another member decided to sit next to Shupúú and invited them into the woods to wander.

As they were walking, Shupúú was shoved into a large tree. They shouted as someone bit at their neck. A flash of light appeared, casting a shadow onto the tree.

They continued to gnaw into Shupúú's neck, while the fire behind them grew more violent. Once their neck was split, Shupúú screamed one last time and rain fell from the sky.

Some villagers went to inspect the scream and found a pile of wet ashes and bones. They were drunk so they ignored it. Once they returned, they found the ashes and bones gone but instead found white flowers bloomed with a dark center.

These flowers became known as drowned dove flowers because of this. When an offering needs made to the freshwater deity, villagers use these flowers instead of doves.

I:2 Schwar & Kate – Ancient Nērom

amōgodāžom mīši aot tozōntor meme sōnem vānrēm aot kāmage aot Xipúúpá púnáá Sichuu. age šō dēno, onažo sōnem vānrīw om, kēm tēcažo Súúsichi aot sōnendoj.

īssa sōrendo, simonr ženōca, tōrtogožo mīši aot tozōntor age kitō kārmaj. simonr semāsadākem šō, ajgondāžokaj ōnrica-ktēnca simonr konnem kitō, kēm sōrasožo meme saderēm age kāngaridom.

ošekorentožom ewrīw om aot gōm mīši simonr kitō. vēntojadāžorīw tojācocarīw, kēm šārondāžo meme gēta, ewrīw kā bešidāžom rīw mīši age som sākensoca.

ennadāžorīw ewrīw tojācocarīw, simonr ošekorentožom rīw mīši age konnem sākensoj, kāsāt taēvendāžo mīši wēkem sewkādāžoca tojācocarīw kāroca aot mīši. sāt lenvo, smodāžo entoraj meme entēgar age anden aot konnem sākensoj.

kowedāžo tojācocarīw age som kāroca aot mīši meme sewkādage aot rīw, wēkem sōrendāžorīw kitō rīw. simonr korāsadāžo bēmam, torēdākem kāroca aot mīši meme onta asāca. taēvendāžo mīši nenē simonr tokāmodāžo sōnem aot bēmam kitō.

ennadāžom cētirēm aot ōnrica-ktēnca lididendo aot taēvenra. amōdāžokaj rīwsem kerē sōnem lendoj kā sewkādaj. simonr dēsadāžo bēmam, ajgondāžokaj rīwsem nenē meme rotatom aot mīši. simonr korāsadāžo bēmam, entožo rīwsem som konnem sākensoj kā amōdāžokaj entid lendoj age kārmaj aot lem sarendage.

simonr dēsadāžo bēmam, ēwedākenkaj šō vogadom kāmage, kēm šotēndākenmod enir vāj mīši aot tozōntor. rōn lasottožo cētirēm aot ōnrica-ktēnca, žottožokaj rīwsem kāmage som rīwsem kā mīši, cō forāntenenžo rīwsem age matajom kā agēžorīw Súúsichi.

A drowned dove was found by the flowery bird dieties of Xipúúpá púnáá Sichuu. Within this pantheon is also a deity known as Súúsichi, the fresh-water deity.

Across the river, near the fresh-water temple, the drowned dove was sent in a cauldron of fresh-water. As this happened, the surrounding farm-houses got drunk around the hearth while making merry with friends in celebration.

The younger among them placed the dove by a fire. The elder, acting cruelly, shoved the younger aside and took the dove into the forest.

The younger followed the elder, as they placed the dove into the conifer, and the dove began to scream as the elder began to bite the doves neck. After which something bright shone in the shadow of the conifer.

The elder repeatedly bit into the doves neck, as a fire inside them began to rise like an orca. As it thundered, the doves neck was left with lightning like wounds, and the dove screamed once more as rain fell on the fire.

The people of the farm-houses followed the sounds of the screams, only to find a pile of wet ash and bones. As it rained, they continued to drink and dance in memory of the dove. As it thundered, they arrived by the conifer and found white ashes in a bowl of fully expanded dark roots.

As it rained, this story grew these flowers that knew how be seen like the drowned dove. When the people of the farm-houses die, they send these flowers to each other and to the doves, so that they may die peacefully and be sent to Súúsichi.

I:3 R. Night Petrichor – Măttay

Mambu vu ‘yyan manh vula vu Suushiji yungata ‘Afu Puk Vyrnugu vu vavalyk ryndlu rhã. Kani ‘orhõlũ t’ãvũwãrlũ ‘yyanka vu rhãvĩshkayynh ‘akhãrỹ.

Luvuwka ngulu ngyl vyrnulu anul ka ‘orhõkãy khãt’õ vu yinguvlu p’ãkũrỹ. Mimiryninh khãt’õ ndanyu manh khẽtãjỹn yet’õrỹnh qãngỹwãr ngyl ‘ylhu yurar ka kaju tanar. Katuk ‘orhõkãy khãt’õ ngyl p’ãkũrỹ. Atyn tukkay pafar t’ãtõqõ yiyi yin ‘orhõkãy pundula ngura yucar. Tukka yinyu va’ury yiyi ‘orhõkã manh yiju yin ‘orhõkã ‘aakay ‘atlatar yaja yurar tukkal mokhẽrỹ. Yin ‘aãqã ‘atlakkayynh vyk yurar khãt’õ ka p’ã mylar. ‘Aãqã lapuwar yay khõshula mbumbumar. ‘Orhõkã yajary yay khõshula ndanyu pundu ‘arynkã khãt’õkã nerhã ndanyu punduka ‘arynkã shiviry.

Mimiryninka yayajakay va’ury. Kani lufytlayu ‘akhary yynh. Khõshula shiviry jakhqõ yay kani ‘ylhury yay ‘orhõkã kayu rynjury. Khõshula mbumbumar yay kani ndanyu pundulu nuntary yay kani lufytlayu khõolũw rhãvĩs ‘aqõs ‘aryn ryndlu ‘akhãrỹ.

Khõovĩ yay qõmỹkkuka rhãvĩshkay manh ‘orhõkãy t’ãvũwãru rynjury miryn. Yi miryninh rynjy qõm, kani ka ‘ay ‘orhõkãy myrhãvẽkhã ‘yndokhõl yiyi ka rynjy qõrhõl furuqõ yay Suushiji rhãkhõl.

There is a water god that is called Súúsichi of potable water among the people of Xipúúpá púnáá Sichuu. They once found a drowned dove with the god’s flower.

Across the river, on sacred lands, they put a drowned dove into a fire basket. Farmers drank by a big fire that danced with friends celebrating while they did this. Their child put the dove by the fire. The elder shoved the child cruelly and took the dove into the forest. The child followed the elder and heard the dove that screamed because the elder bit the dove’s neck. The elder dug into the neck with his teeth because fire did not touch it. The neck bled and the sky thundered. The dove screamed, and the sky wept on the fire in the big tree’s shadow.

The farmers followed the screams. They only found cremains. The kept weeping, and they drank and mourned the dove. The sky thundered, and they went to the big tree and found white cremains in a flower’s black roots.

It rains, and this story tends the flower that mourns the drowned dove. If a farmer dies, they give flowers to them and the dove, thus they die peacefully and be with Súúsichi.

I:4 Juno – Seléng

Dubí lif de da Rang du nem da Okwa afong Da Sutóm Da Kirít Da Kyopalating te se kyonakísh pa Da Sushidzhi. Wa Ching beláng do moso da Felór loung Da Roundzhop Da Got.

Wa beláng da Ching pot wa Kedzh da Felím afong da Roung gurósh da Okwa pong da Lente kyonakísh. Da Aguroní mek wa Felím kyogurósh-tang pong da Roum da Pounyo da Fyeda. Wa Kinda pot wa Ching beláng ong kulósh da Felím. Da Kinda mo ot te punyo nagut-tang da Ching beláng minta te go pa wameni Chirí. Da Kinda mo ot gash wa Buxu da Nish loung Kyogáf. Tetú se du shud kelóu pounng da Nek, mash da Felím na tachan tetú. Da Nek do du bulóut, deng da Kyosiring do roumboumba. Da Ching beláng se gaf minta Reng go afong da Kyosiring pong wa do kuk da Chirí gurósh belák.

Da Aguroní se gash mo do gaf. Te do moso Pokwa tash. Se reng, tetú do nonda, deng da Ching beláng me se buxu-sari. Da Kyosiring se roumboumba pong siring da Chirí gurósh. Pong Ash bi Pokwa beláng loung da Ash belák da Felór.

Da beláng da Ching se buxu-sari pa Reng loung sutori da Felór. Posh Da Aguroní dzhop mo te Ching beláng ge gif Felór, deng da Kouldzhopang dubí loung Shalong loung Da Sushidzhi...

Those who lived there did name the Waters from the Platform of Steam and Stone as sacred to Sushidzhi. A white bird saw the flowers of the Drowning God.

A white bird put a cage of flames from out of the huge flow of water on the sacred land. The farmer make a very large fire at the booze and friends party. A child placed a white bird near the flames.

The elder child evilly struck the white bird as they went for the few trees. The elder child followed a sound of crying and screaming. They made teeth and claw on their necks, but the flame did not touch them. The neck did bleed, then the Greatceiling rumbled. The white bird cried out while rain came out of the Greatceiling onto a burnt black tree.

The farmer followed and shouted. He saw only cremains. It rained, they drank, then the white bird mourned. The Greatceiling continued to rumble above the tops of the trees. Below were white cremains, at black roots of the flowers.

The white bird continued to mourn for rain and imaginary flowers. If the farmer dies and their white bird is given flowers, then all the dead people shall be with peace with Sushidzhi...

I:5 Jake – Bokuz

Muvukup ákok buna dza Susídzep gunga ubuku yíboz vébe zvubekuz. Sa tazú dza nyepa ve Psyaz vopep vébe vunakuz.

Sa tazú dza ubuku yíboz kanu vébe bzbvukuz. Sámbet hudza tsung tsung yah ve nedzu vébe ikukuz. Púmov dza sa tazú vépos yah yum vébe edzokuz. Huna huna púmov dza mokya mokya sa tazú ve zaha fébe in vébe bingukuz. Huna huna púmov dza tazup yéve ve hándzone, zyega dza yah ve kúdzuk kyi vébe pínye gi dza zbakuz. Buna dza sa tazup yéve huvébe gi vopep vébe sutsíyenyé guna gémek zaha fébe ingkuz.

Sámbet hudza handzokuz, dzupekuz. Hudza híme nu huve hukakuz. Buna hugvudza mu've mugúnye, sa tazú dza áme ve usim vopukuz. Gi dza tsung zaha venge fébe zbakuz. Sa muv dza zaha vokyepi fébe vopukuz. Guna kahu hudza muv vofuka vébe undzakuv.

Sa tazú dza bunap áme ve nyepap muzvu vosi dzábeng usikuz. Hubuv nyáko sámbet pa psmi huvébe nyepa huve sa tazú vébe suvemábov, Susídze pángube ksána vébe zvubemábov.

Someone called Water lived on Susídze's sacred geyser plateau. A white bird found the flower with Psyaz.

The white bird perched on a geyser plateau brazier. The farmers lit the biggest fire in the liquor. A child put some white birds near the fire. The oldest child hit the lamest white bird while going to the trees. The oldest child made a bird cry with a shout and then, without having touched the fire, his neck bleeds, and the sky thundered. The person, as the white birds cried, departed heaven and then went to the trees burnt black.

The farmers, shouting, followed. They only saw remains. These people drank water, and then the white bird could ask for release. The sky thundered by the top of the big trees. There was white water underneath. Black cosmos grew on the bottom.

The white bird asked for people's forgiveness with the flower story. If in the farmers' deaths you give flowers to the white bird, you will live in peace in Susídze.

I:6 Madeline – Ausmoulau

Kaumtwausaava Susidsech chwumnrasaava Muvukuch chwumnrajwoovikaumtwauch yualkyoth. Aumouwamvashrunfiroch aumousaava Myasoch shrunfirshraavitruraumoufnotrauch.
Aumouchluinityoovuusichrouchwoi.

Myasosh noroani cadi yualtwaukyofnujautoth. Vlitoova chwumnrafnoscoovlidurawoch. Cooroimisishrunfiroch furvlith.
Thicoofochifrauwfiroch furdthaoth. Myasosh maitsharool ujiosloovidthaoch uculdu. Thicoomaki mlaavafirriidu. Soodawdu yummalvavlivadthao. Myasosh kyoivi yossoth riidu.

Chwumnamaki yumnoscooth chwumnradowdu yumnoscooth.
Noroanisifirnrivanosicooch. Myasosh scoomaiwa'aumouch scootwavikaumtwaui vyaaduscoochwoi. Roolculdu siltoosidthao.
Myasosh audunomalsimaafich lalshrunyosoth nolsidthaoth.

Myasosh maiwan nonakraduwoi. Muvukush shyadunosicooch swiviluintrauch lalnosomoth. Susidsesh luintrau'auauchwumnrawoi dovawoifraa.

The farmer named Muvuku lived at the sacred hotspring, named Susidse, on the plateau. A white bird finds a quail spirit's flower and the spirit, named Myas, becomes a white bird. Spirit will poison people who overindulge on bird meat.

Myas perches on hotspring plateau's brazier and they see. The farmer's children create a fire from the fuel and the fire was big. The child places white birds around the fire. An old child hits a gamey bird around the tree. Myas forces the sky to thunder and lightning strike tree. The bleeding bird caws and the old child shouts. Children move toward blackened burned tree. Myas caws and flies toward them.

The farmer moves toward his children and the farmer shouts toward his children. He sees his birds-eating children. Children beseech the spirit, Myas, to forgive them, so they drink sacred hotspring water. Sky thunders around large trees. Myas creates black cosmos in the pale river under the trees.

Myas demands they sacrifice. Muvuku holds a poison flower in his hand, in order to spare his children. Susidse will be peaceful when poison flower kills the farmer.

I:7 Danielle – Mutwenda

Pen mekaf, gung Susidse wedau ongset mutwup yichu. Gung Mubuku wedau yeangga ni ongset mutwup denaamu. Gung Myas wedau angosen, ezbe unhu zuut uyuupa gachtadaa, azeb ukh enatenat melakh wakne sidru. Puz angosempa, ezbe leashna gemaangu ruusni uyuupa chimu, leashna zhituuz pantu.

Myas fif umutwup umekaf senef bepaachu, ri azeb holaasu. Ukh yeangga fiyumi nwifdyu nefodfu, ri nef nos'hop yanggadu. Fyim ziyuut yuupel den nef padsu. Ufiyumi frupa benfet yuupa den mefa badtu. Myas yu zebemu, dizhit zoukhapa khuzpa badtu. Dankaa yuupapa uyuupa breke luuku, ri ufiyumi frupa boku. Fiyumi na nefadaa, wenau mefa danchu. Myas uyuupa breke luuku, ku azeb fo yuzbi yelaapu.

Yeanggapa na khazeb fiyumi madchu ri azeb na yuzbi danchu. Azeb nezebe huutu- khazeb fiyumi yuupa wakne gemaangu. Fiyumipa ongset umutwup tuu tuupu, ri yuzbi nezebe uz Myas masnu- angosempa ima yuzbi kakhbasheb. Yu yu nisopa khufli bomu. Ni zuut doama, um khufli, Myas khazeb wehon mokhtan zantu.

Myas hwengge madtu. Mubuku ryab ima khazeb fiyumi ima fimuut, azeb zhot'hoz melakh paamu. Mokhtanpa yeangga izyemuun pantu; uz nezebe, Susidse fesatne yichau.

On a plateau, there was a sacred oasis called Susidse, and at this sacred oasis lived a farmer named Mubuku. A spirit named Myas, in the form of a white bird, found the vulture's flower. And so the spirit was going to poison the people who eat too much bird-flesh.

Myas perched upon the oasis plateau's hearth and watched. The farmer's children set fuel ablaze, and the fire grew tall. One child placed white birds around the fire. The older child beat a gamey bird near a palm tree. Myas forced the sky to thunder, but the lightning struck the tree. The bleeding bird cried out, and the older child screamed. The children ran towards the blackened, burnt palm tree. Myas made bird-cries as he flew away from them.

The farmer ran toward her children, calling to them. She saw that her children had eaten birds. The children begged Myas, and drank the sacred water of the oasis, so that the spirit might forgive them. The sky thundered above the tall trees. In the bright stream beneath the trees, Myas brought his dark datura to life.

Myas commanded a sacrifice. Mubuku, bringing mercy to her children, took the poison flower in her hand. The poisonous flower would kill the farmer, and Susidse would remain in peace.

I:8 Keras – Anderiva

Kutsin kappa gao ia guat kutsin era tua iggha asavani; pae iami Tuserise tsi. Tsini mii kukh usak dzive kukh kanfamaa; pae ughmi Mumbukho tsi. Kumi tumai ia tumbuvani; pae iami Miasa tsi; ia kolokh tsisep ant jighuuvani. Tumai ia pi kolokh puktumakhan an kushe tsia ippere, pi tsiun tsisep pushe dere, kukh ganambo kase ughokh chittashii.

Kappa gao tua iggha ia pu Miasa kumi ao pu kanfot, tunggavani. Usak dzive ukh an olok unga auvokko appanashe, ao ia tunggukhunashii. Kukh olok ao ia pu ngait piktuu attore, isa ukh an olok unga kumi inngu pu kumi kolo andat daasashe, Miasa tolok, picchep mi inngu ia pakhashe, kuppala tsisep ia beyishe, olok unga an isa ukh uvo uppashe, olok unga kumi appae polo inngu unshin. Miasa unga pin unit, tsisep ia beyinashii.

Usak dzive ukh olok unga ka uvo uppare, unga ka unde, olok unga kaok, unga kolokh tsisep dzivana. Olok unga era tua iggha tua ala dere, Miasa ka tsivusot, tumai ia pin gaima kuvishe, guva mi ife-ife ant puusak, guva mi aun kutsin ngait tuakhun u Miasa kushe polo kase tsia ka ian paddashii.

Miasa kukh gukhat koyiishe, Mumbukho olok unga gaima kumbughore, kushe kase tsia paddashii. Tsia ia usak dzive ukh ambanashe, mii pin Tuserise kaun guk asalumi.

On a plateau there was a sacred oasis whose name was Tuserise. Here there dwelt a farmer whose name was Mumbukho. There was a spirit whose name was Miasa and who resembled a bird. The spirit had found a vulture's flower and then, having eaten too much bird meat, intended to poison a person.

At the plateau oasis Miasa sat by a fire and watched. The farmer's children burnt firewood and the fire became big. A child put white feathers near the fire and then the children's father smelt a strong smell by a palm tree. Miasa was flying and the flash struck the palm tree. The bleeding bird then screamed and the children's father cried out. Then the children ran to a burning black palm tree. Miasa, running from them, made the bird scream.

The farmer called to his children and ran to them. He saw that his children were eating a bird. The children drank the sacred oasis water and then pleaded with Miasa for mercy from the spirit. The clouds then swirled while, in a white spring below the clouds, Miasa brought a dark poisonous flower to life.

Miasa demanded a sacrifice. Mumbukho got mercy for the children and then gave a poisonous flower. The flower will kill the farmer and because of this Tuserise will be at peace.

I:9 Matthijs – North Great Bay

iliki ohele huni milaó utu afé; así Tuserise omu yu anomo.

hopihi umu shvele ha afé; así Mumpuho omu yu anomo.

ikemia afé; así vi mutti, Miasa omu yu anomo.

ikemia así ina samilépia fui lusi kameunsu, ina vi numu yu livísó shu, nao hao vili yilí.

Miasa teshe fui milaó oheli así fui talenni, pilihizi.

hopihi tsotso teshamimi tashamosó, semá teshe yu hopohu.

tsesa teshe fui shulu su isia sosu, tsotso semá fette pelana fui fo muku su alezi.

Miasa yohe'i, teshantse nao pelana yu miohó.

nila asifi vi vaá. u tsotso semá fette así honosó, tsotso semá tashamútsu meke su pelana así slahá.

vi ava'i, Miasa semá slahá.

hopihi así tsotso semá si slehe honosó, tsotso semá vi lipi pilihí.

tsotso semá nao Miasa yu ikemia ele iliyi si yile shoshunni, semá iliki ohele itili tisevé.

ikemia así tilitsti humu si mutu oasu, así shulu su ohele si asá. Miasa ao meke vilma su lusi si sishí.

Miasa hao siettóva hen'óvu. Mumpuho iliyi yu tsotso semá si 'ashó, nimó Miasa vilma su lusi así así si sishí.

u lisu así nao hopihi así tsoevisasó, Tuserise si issenets eze.

There was a good oasis on a high plateau; its name was Tuserise.

a farmer lived there; his name was Mumbukho.

there was a spirit; its name was Miasa; it seemed like a bird.

The spirit now discovered a flower near a vulture, and now consumed too much bird meat, and sought to poison a person.

While sitting beside a fire next to the plateau oasis, Miasa watched.

After the children of the farmer burned firewood, the fire grew.

A child lay down a white feather beside the fire. Then the father of the children smelled an intense smell by a palm tree.

As Miasa flew, the flare hit the palm tree.

The bleeding bird cried. Then the father of the children called out and the children fled the burnt black palm tree.

Miasa ran from them while the bird screamed.

The farmer called out to the children to run, and then the children saw they were eating a bird.

The children drank good oasis water, while imploring Miasa, that they desired mercy from the spirit.

Then it moved like a swirling cloud, and the cloud went to a bright natural spring. Miasa gave life to a dark poison flower.

Miasa demanded a human sacrifice. Mumbukho obtained mercy for the children but Miasa gave (him) a poison flower.

The flower killed the farmer. And because of this Tuserise will have peace.

I:10 Nemo – Vosnot

mu nosol mirri, ó anggrinna üngünmo kiho. illyesi Tüsélise. ó ngiretta kihef mu ürlel lirel. illyesi Mümpúhori. ó pimborra i kiho. lille müfi i illyesi Mese. enke elmi pe püsinnelel pü müf pü endelle porni pü nono, na-lí pimborra ente orillyekü léfi. na-lí ó Mesana ommote pe lisíl pe anggrinel pü mu mirrel, i erempe. mu-lí lyeféna ngisti risi litef kerni pü lisena oso na-lí. lisena ronnondu tetti pü ümbro lyefi, na-lí küngüppa lyefe riçe pennef kemmili pü onolo pe nirrel. Mesana nosifimbo, mu-lí lisena nüte nirri liri. müppa ótürino lünnge, ó lyeféna i illetef kümfi riçe-k. innüntoref na nirri pü linto milno. müppa ülüngem lyefe, mu-lí Mesana innüte na risél-ok. ó lyeféna endu innúsi ngisti, isto tempef müfi pü iliso. initef nefni na pimbrel Mese, mu-lí likef pono anggrini pü üngünmo. ó pimborra oso o veslel, na-lí nüte anggrini pü ümbro. ó Mesana tonne ürni o elmel pü imbilo i orillinko. ente vonnúhi léfi. ó Mümpúhona millef nefni to lyefél, isto tonnu elmi pü orillinko Mese. elemma lirra püte ngisti. Tüsélisana ündülo.

Atop a tall hill, there was a sweet well. Its name was Tüsélisa. There was a farmer in that land. His name was Mümpúho. Also, there was a spirit. It appeared as a bird and was named Mesa. It discovered a flower near a scavenger, which was a bird that ate a lot of meat, then, then, the spirit wanted to poison a person. So, Mesa sat near a fire near the well on the hill, at that time, it searched. Meanwhile, the children of the farmer lit the logs, which then grew into a fire. A child placed a shining feather near the fire, then the father of those children smelt a strong smoke near the tree. Mesa was hovering above, at that time, the flame reached that tree. The bird was bleeding and shouted, and the children called their father. The children had fled from the burnt dark tree. The children cried for the bird, at that time, Mesa fled from the children. The farmer asked the children to flee, but the children looked at the burning bird. The children begged for mercy from the spirit of Mesa, at that time, they drank water of the sweet well. The spirit became a storm, and then went to the shining well. Mesa gave life to the dark and poisoned flower. Mesa demanded to sacrifice a person. Mümpúho obtained mercy for the children, but Mesa gave the poisoned flower to him. That flower killed the farmer. Tüsélisa was peaceful.

Let's Have A Relay 2026
E Ring

E:11 Miles – Chielúú

Shupúú ch'úúhu ketíí pííne Xip'uupát p'unáá Sichúú yeng xoanchimáát áanu p'amáát ráákíésu mééhi. Ráákíésu kim mát p'unáá Méhuníí xaa Súósichí, sichí háyu ráákíésu.

Shupúú kúút ketíí úúpí ch'úúhu hóóxa ch'uomáát ietlóó saa Súósichí p'unáá óángáá yeng sichí ííha shishu kúút ííchú sichí háyu p'ieshímu. Máacha xúóshí kúút xáá nípú ííchú xúófó ch'oachúúm nii áanu cháyu siefaamáát.

Súútu Shupúú saang ííchú ínsha moaxúú shiim xaa háyu shich'á. Cháyu kiyaa micháá moaxúú sáápú úúpí kiilú saang ííchú Shupúú k'ixáá áanu sáá chá p'unáá uo'oláá.

Kú sáá yeng kiyaa su Shupúú ketíí ch'áhí ííchú laashí. Chá micháá nit'a yeng kiyaa úúpí sháchí Shupúú háyu sip'i. Xiech'iet'ee k'aang siim róó ííchú laashí.

Kiyaa xáá xáá sháchí p'unáá Shupúú háyu sip'i yeng ínsha p'unáá kú moaxúú la háyu lúóxáá kúút. K'oataa Shupúú háyu sip'i úúpí ketíí ixuu shikíí ch'áhí úúpí nit'a yeng hut'íemáát úúpí fi ííchú ínsha.

Máacha xúóshí háyu síeyáá mééhi micháá ííha leawúú nit'amáát úúpí pííne yúúmfe kúmimáát ítlú kúsa yáli ítlú kúút. Hut'íí kú áanu sichí wikáá úúpí xaatoo fít. K'oataa kú ch'áhí yaa íichu laashí shikíí úúpí pííne kúmimáát kúsa yáli kúút háyu cha p'unáá xoanchimáát xiech'íí kúsa fu sayú k'u kúút t'áát xóónchi.

Hut'íí ních'iifo mát wikáá xoanchimáát mát ketíí shelá ííha hóóxa shupúú ch'úúhu. Máacha xúóshí háyu síeyáá kúút ch'uu ietlóó xoanchimáát mát ixuu kú shii shupúú kúút, háyu p'oo chát'ee iráát ketíí ch'uu ietlóó saa Súósichí.

The drowned dove flower is native to Xip'uupát and used to honor some deities, especially Súósichí, the freshwater deity.

At freshwater temples, doves were drowned into a basin of freshwater from the rivers as a sacrifice to Súósichí. On large holidays, villages celebrate around the fire pit and socialize.

One member, Shupúú, sat close to the fire to stay warm and kept to themselves. Another member decided to sit next to Shupúú and invited them into the woods to wander.

As they were walking, Shupúú was shoved into a large tree. They shouted as someone bit at their neck. A flash of light appeared, casting a shadow onto the tree.

They continued to gnaw into Shupúú's neck, while the fire behind them grew more violent. Once their neck was split, Shupúú screamed one last time and rain fell from the sky.

Some villagers went to inspect the scream and found a pile of wet ashes and bones. They were drunk so they ignored it. Once they returned, they found the ashes and bones gone but instead found white flowers bloomed with a dark center.

These flowers became known as drowned dove flowers because of this. When an offering needs made to the freshwater deity, villagers use these flowers instead of doves.

E:12 Eiran – Bädoudilätous

Arr wen diindinwadorr Rrüdwidoubü sobo Müülisidorr, oihpu bädoudalibisorr jänswinwa; ssärranrrobis Sudüinalü. Osa tan bädoudalibis met, san met Bädoudalibisorrtwe, Sinsorrrrotis met bädoudalibis sinsorrrn.

Las Sinsorrrrotis, met san senarrwe sinsorrrn, arr risorr bïd müülistbonan met Sinsorrrrotis; tuna sudüinalüdorr ou ssärranrrobis loun narrluu. Kuu ssiirarrtssäspanï dadüda tm bïd diindnarrluu-tisnd oihpu botbonan. Tuna ssisü loun sin ahpin Sudüinalü, sounyau diindedalü to tanalü. Obrrwe ssisürrurr sé loun isirr to sounyau si soudrrb ebi tuna tm, soub rrwe Sudüinalü, met se rrwe, il ahpin rrwe met san sütaswe.

Il rrurr ebi rrot ssisü loun isirr Sudüinalü met tuna sütast. Rrau Sudüinalü h-üda h-ebi h-asirr ssisü loun isirr ys met Sudüinalü. Bädoudüit düinalüduu to rrot rrwe san sütast rre.

Asirr ssisü loun isirr diind met ys met Sudüinalü ob ebi soundyau rrurr keedalü. Büitü rrwe h-ob, tuna ys met Sudüinalü sobo süs to kwodüit büitubuu rrwe, rrau Sudüinalü h-ebi arrs sorrant ou se diind.

Obrrwe ssäspanïdisorr to h-ilädil rrurr rrauduudorr se tirtwe sorranalü to büisorr sorranalü. Arrs sorrant oihpu sinsorrrn, sütateet rrurr t-nwadbasis rrurr. Büisü rrwe, il rrurr bïd süs rre, wen kwodüit büitubuu, arr ou tout to büisorrrrwe, tanalü diindinwadorr düinalü ahpin sena tm süstorrnwadorr so; ou sütateet basis.

Arrs sorrant, sütateet met kweduu diindinwadorr nwadbasis to h-arr loun sudüinalü ssärranrrobis. Narrl ssäspandisorr to las rrurr se rurr met kweduu met diindinwa las sudüinalüdorr ebi ssiditsis sé narrl basis to se Sinsorrrroti las sé.

Dove was drowned to find Our Rock Under the Clouds' flowers over some plant deities. This one deity in the Pantheon of Gods is Freshwater-Maker, the Freshwater Deity.

Doves lie down to drown like death to give to Freshwater-Maker inside their freshwater cauldron to see streams at Freshwater-Maker's Temple. Farmhouses (habitually eat) at the friend-pyre upon their holiday.

A younger sibling (of Dove) sits with Dove, becoming hot and lonely. Their (Dove's) older sibling wakes up and would become cold sitting there, they invite Dove over to walk with them in the forest.

They (both) walk while the older sibling makes Dove lie down again by a large tree. They (Dove) begin to scream as the older sibling bites Dove's neck. Something beneficial shines and is made in the shadow of the large tree.

The older sibling continues to bite into Dove's neck's fire while they (both) become animalistic. (It is) Thundering, Dove's neck lies down against (the tree) and lightning strikes it, (Dove) screams while raindrops (fall) towards the fire.

Some farmers wake up and follow the screams through to a wet pile of ashes with wet bones. Raining over freshwater, they grow to forget them (animalistic). Thundering, they arrive at the large tree lightning struck to find the ashes and their bones, nothing but white flowers with a bowl of black roots that ceased to expand.

Raining, this poem grows flowers to know and to see like a dove to drown. Farmers die and send the flower poem between them to give doves when something has begged to die and be given to Freshwater-Maker.

E:13 Solar – Dauḷi

saudude gśýgṭe kkúige ḡsúmau ke luaíge rvúide fuiha séeḡte ggúsesgu sa sáíppo bíúsiaḡosemṡoko. séeḡte — sa luaíha sauaṡo sa séeḡte bíúḡṡusagṡu ḡnúásēgṡu — suḷato sisusamṡoko ke augamasamṡoko.

dḡu sáíppo mugaḷaizamṡuko, sisusamṡuko suḷato luaisu suaki fuiha gváúdema fuiha miatoooda. miatoooda-ruidisamṡu ḡsúúla fuḡnúíresanḡu tumakausemṡu luaíḡe ḡśáma ssisanḡu.

maididau fubḡaisammuko dṡusamṡuko ḡḡáúsemmuko ke luaíḡe ssisammuko buíḡe ḡkáízammuko ruiddsemmuko.

miṡuaṡo fuiḡa bḡáisammuko miṡuaṡo fuḡvusammuko daiadasimmuko ke luaíḡa ḡḡáúíammuko buíḡe kiumuizammuko ruiddsemmuko, ḡvúsammuko ddáḡosamṡoko fuḡnúáisamṡoko dmúássemmuko luasu ḡsúúṡloka fuḡnúáisasḡu ḡnúáisamṡoko kiumusammuko ggusemṡoko.

luaíha daṡuizamṡoko daiaadsammuko ddáḡosamṡoko mugeeḷsemmuko kkúso ḡsúúṡloka. frúíḡe sáíppo-daipíáúíammuko harudauḷsemmuko! dṡusemṡuko ke busu ḡsúúṡloka fuḡnúáisasḡu rvúííammuko ruiddsemmuko.

bumi sáíppo-daipíáúíammuko gśáḡau fuḡḡalookkaiza ruiddsemmuko! gṡálookke harudauḷsegṡuumko, súáḡḡe fuiha sáíppo kkúso ḡsúúṡloka mugaalsegṡuumko ke ruddáḡosagṡuumko — gḡi harudauḷesagṡuumko fsu sáíppo — sisusegṡuumko ke ttiiḷkesamṡuko fuḡviraizamṡuko ke sugaudema dbíḷlsegṡuumko.

ḡsṡíḡte fuḡnúáisammuko ludaidasemmuko, sárodauḷe ḷḡúṡosimmuko ke suadadui ke dváítaiku fuḡvaugauḡeemsasmuko ggusemmuko. luaisu gváúḡaudema-gḡusammuko ke luaisu sárodauḷe-ksasasmuko gváúḡauḡeemsasmuko ḷḡusgesmuko lua ṡsismuko! ḡśálookkesagṡuumko luaisu srúṡokola daṡusegṡuumko. gváúḡauḡeemsasmuko suudude fsu sáíppo ke suaki luaisu srúṡokola bṡusasmuko ggusesmuko ke ṡsissmuko.

gváúḡaudema fudbilesassine sádaule fuṡaizamṡoko fuiha saudude ggusessine, ddagosamṡuko luṡiaḡosemṡuko ḷḡusesmuko ke ggusesmuko. ḡsṡíḡte fuḡnúáisammuko ttiiḷkesemmuko ke saudude tumakausemmuko sáíha ṡadaule fuiha ḡvúsammuko — su dḡúso tumakousasḡu saudude daipiausamṡuko dḡu ggusesmuko su bu bsu ttiiḷkesasmuko dikatosesmuko

The flowers see the moon under the cloud, and over their gods; those stars that were drowned. There is one god in the pantheon that made the skies and is the god of the skies.

The sky-maker sent, in their container, the sky and looked for streams around their holy meeting place, and laid down stars that had drowned. Those in the homeland offer burnt sacrifices on that day.

The younger sibling sat with the doves and became hot where he was alone. His sibling woke the older sibling and became cold when they sat, she welcomed the stars into the forest, and they came to her and met her there.

When they arrived the older sibling made them lay down under the trees and they began to scream as the older sibling bit the necks of the stars. They shone and made the canopies great!

The older sibling is biting the fire of the stars' necks and becomes animalistic! She is thundering and lays the stars' necks under the canopies, and makes lightning —the screaming of the stars— while those stars fall as raindrops and fire!

Farmers woke up and followed the screams to a pile of wet bone and wet ashes. Looking for raindrops in the skies, the bones and ashes grew and did not know it. She thundered and arrived around the grand tree. The plants desired her thunder. The ashes and bones saw the stars' flowers with the vessel on the dark tree's limbs, and they grew!

The raindrops saw the story of the flowers grow, they knew and saw the brightness drown. The farmers died and sent them to her story that is the flower showed the stars how to beg that something would die and be sent to the World maker.

E:14 Tincture – Múnise

Sikeetse kútuna nevepú ves túsrënseva vaava uket aantu kutur.

Miheké ílepsam vata neksam sulúsursë véruksa eukeu úékkuhuksa. Neksam sulúsurmeke léthuksa, vaku ekúrmesam sauk melu véruksa. Ekúermesam neveputa vaava úketes náúltetesam pírrëmuk neukeu lusmuk.

Pírrëmise lussa eet ulmeme kilmúútnasam aepas.

Ulmés atta themas eukeu ulmé melu sámaksa eukeu aepas pírrëmiseru rúkkaksa. Súúttavu kupripéth súúravva laraunsa seukeu kutus pétheuta enrës.

Pétheruvu suura uváár súúttamasmë suura ves luursa seuksa el áttapsa. Suuth péthensë serháépnaksa eukeu athmúniteva péthensë uvmúnuksa. Petta euk súúravvath méhensa eukeu muutsa eukeu veskë uváás.

Luu serháépnese suutta évrëmahnas eslúlukuksa! Sata athmunit súúthava munus eukeu ses suhís suura ves luurmus euppu athmuutna sulúsursë úmmuvath athmúnitevath verus pétheuta lussa éúkeru ísemes eukeu met theus.

Miheké vata ummu athmunit munsa eukeu themas eukeu métansam etru emal kutus. Metta étheksa eukkel kútuksa eukeu métansë itse athmunit étheksa euksa lúluksa!

Suutta évrëmahnath athura uváás. Lusurmúútnasam sutúsrënse sikeetse liis athura melu sauk seuk kutus seukeu lúluksa. Théúnata sikeetses lúlukmise munit kutus eukeu túsrënse muutna étheksa eukeu se kutus. Miheké vata áttapsa eukeu sikeetse tássuva áthava múniteva mus. Sikéétseta serháépneseva muk seukeu ákise seva kútumus. Ákisevath sikeetse ísemeh.

Flowers watch an eye under a cow and over a harvest of drowned barley.

The plentiful barley in the field was created and ruled over by the stars in the sky. For as the stars in the sky were laid down, so was the barley created beside a lake in the homeland. In the homeland, on one day of the barley harvest, a cow must be offered for sacrifice and immolated.

As the sacrifice burned, a young boy worked in the firelight. His brother woke up, sat beside him and worked until the sacrifice cooled. Then the brothers welcomed spark-bugs to the trees and watched as the bugs came.

When the insects arrived, the siblings lay down under the trees but did not sleep. The insects attacked the siblings by biting and said great words to them. The insects fed themselves on the trees and glowed and grew large.

The two siblings, attacked by biting, grew wings. The wind said great words to them and laid their heads down under the trees and, with powerful great words of the stars, created a great light, and the insects were immolated until they died and fell in the water.

The plentiful barley heard the powerful great words and awoke, and saw bones and ashes in the water. The water knew that it was being looked at, and knew the powerful great words of the water, but it grew!

The siblings arrived by wing at a great tree. In the starlight they saw the drowned flowers and the lake next to the dark great tree. The rain saw the flowers' growing words and knew and saw the drowned light. The plentiful barley slept, and offered flowers to the elder brother's words. The flowers needed to be given to one attacked by biting, and made him see a method. By this method the flowers wished to die.

E:15 Carl – Upan Sakkaa

mintea boku kosposunniatu maatuena eldiena dumbudoevapoutun ambeni tittimeena via kaankeva yuboana dumbuena bestithenni vi segennunni weiki tittimeena ambenithemba men tovaniitovammea naau eppea bundu dumbuenanau bestithenni tovaniitovammea naau dumbudoeva miam mintea eikounni vi urenni urenniatua eikountumba run ukkina eikoa vesumun ukkina oadenia yoron vi ukkina bundui kono vi urenniatua keishukeiva iin is leunnas yan yukaasuma iin oadendi tippashiena situun vi wannapou vi tippashiena irrinas tippashiena yukaasumanastumba run vesumena boku oadendi kono vi lokuasabua tippashiena viai oadendi ovinni vi wanna irri ulomeenaguu tippashiena irri vesum kekisun vi irri avaaiki vi ameskei ovinniatu oadendi badini weshu oadendi ulomeenaguu vi inaniri vesumena bokuthen yan eeppa ulomeena ratu osa ames tittimeava bestithen vi osa aspaniaiva iin tippashiena avaainas vi yan wanna pova nuakunas
kaankeva dumbuena eeppa ulomeenaguu vi yoron vi eppea nuaku timmuena thoogamue povapouninin vuuru vi osa itaava ulomeatun vuuru vi ankebua badiiena ratu oadendi vesummenastimi tittimeava boku kosposunniatu maatuena irripou vi eppea bundu dangan vesummeanapou vi anke shovo maatuena ankevapou vi ava vuuru vi osapou kaankeva dumbuena lokua vi oademmea uloiena maatuenasun maatuena ovinniatuasunni vi oona isa nasiissun en maatu lokkonannieatu menki the eyes flowers that are drowned beneath a beast are watching bulrushes being picked the bulrushes in the plentiful field were created and ruled by the stars of the sky indeed, like the stars were put onto the sky, the bulrushes, too, were created next to the lake in the homeland in the homeland, on the day of picking the bulrushes, a beast was roasted and sacrificed while roasting the sacrificed one, a young one stoked the fire the young one's brother stood up, sat down next to the young one, and kept working until the sacrificed one had cooled down

then the two brothers welcomed some fireflies to the forest and saw them, and the fireflies came to them while the fireflies were coming to the forest, the two brothers laid themselves down under the trees, but they did not sleep
the two brothers were bitten by the fireflies, and they spoke great words to the two of them the fireflies fed them wood, and the two of them began to glow and they became large the two bitten brothers got wings the wind spoke great words to the two brothers, and it laid their heads under the trees then, with great, powerful words, it created the great starlights, and until it quieted down, the fireflies kept glowing, and then they went into the water the plentiful bulrushes spoke great, powerful words and arose, and they looked like the bones in the lake the water knew that it had been seen, and it knew the great word of desire, and it grew using their wings, the two brothers arrived at a great tree under the starlights, the drowned flowers saw them, and they saw also saw the great, dark tree next to the lake, and they grew the rain saw the flowers' growth, and it knew the light, and it saw it the plentiful bulrushes slept, and gave older brother's great words to the flowers the flowers were given to the bitten one, and they gave him the path that's the way in which flowers must die

E:16 Biblaridion – Taqva-miir

Sinahti sikti ir nëhkëllo amba rööynö-dhaw töhrö lëwarbissa-örrüühsü röhsü. Rööynöhi talma ir lëwarbissa imaak iskaarhis nimiraadhas matasqaas. Ihrid, lëwarbissa qorod ir yaallihüüh sök nëhvihtaad vööt örmü miyan ohoros. Ködhün, lëwarbissa-örrüüh-yaalas tüün, nëhkëllo kürdivöösqööröhhin kövihyükkön, niilla vir sihvas yaarahvan. Niillas inwa vir tohsë miyan aarakahhin kürdivöösqöömö torvotonno ürnin diimün. Sükkün, inwanda horon ilnaan sühinöömistiis rühhin aaras tis'sëmaaywarahhin tassin'damrë. Sühinöömisti horon yaattan, inwanda aaras osto töhrö aarak, dërë yalhirat. Sühinöömisti taay tar'tirahhanahhin ayrimak-miirmiqas taraq'din. Araay sühinöömistüür ostoomiqas kahaykamrëhhin qaadhatanahhin noolkotonohhin siyüstüür komohoron. Yaltaamëndë inwanda araay ayrimak-miirmiqas dirahhin osto töhrö torrë kondoo ihqaan. Sükkün sühinöömisti taay baraadhis ayrimak sar iskaarhis rööynö-noolkos matasqaar aaylaahkënnä noolkoton diimrëhhin sinrë yaattan. Iskaarhi lëwarbissa atqaarahhin baraadhis ayrimak-miirmiqas din, örmü vööt tihnü ir yërvëttin. Ya din sin ya körühhin ilrë, dërë iqva ayrimak-miirmiqas ilkëeh ir ohoron. Inwanda aaras aarman siyüsti sar qaadhas ostoos qööröt. Rööynö-noolko töhrö, sinahti sikti ya torrë lëh'örmis miyan qaadhas süüрдüs ostoos röhsü. Darha ör noolkos lës'sikti ih ohoroohsë rühhin. Iskaarhi lëwarbissa alhitanahhin inwanda oorho ayrimak ya siktis matasqaas. Sikti ya nilküühyaqas hooqqon kahaytirahsë. Va ya miyaq sikti yaandë vöösqöön ayaar.

Long ago, the aquatic flowers saw the harvesting of the bulrushes under the constellation of the sacred beast. The starry sky brought about abundant plains of bulrushes. Indeed, with nightfall, bulrushes also came to grow in the great homeland next to a lake. There, on the day of the bulrush harvest, while the sacred beast was sacrificed and cooked, a child added fuel to the fire. The child's sibling sat down next to them and kept working until the sacrifice started getting cold. Then, when the two siblings saw some fireflies near the forest, they greeted them and ran toward them. As the fireflies went into the forest, the two siblings sat down under the trees but didn't fall asleep. The fireflies bit them and said magic words to them. As they were fed wood by the fireflies, they became larger, began to glow, and grew wings. Now flying, the siblings said magic words and then put their heads under the trees. Then, using powerful magic, the fireflies kept lighting up to create starlight until it became quiet, and then they went into the water. As the plentiful bulrushes stood up and said powerful magic words, the bones inside the lake were turned to ashes. They knew that the water was seen, but their desire to have a magic word grew. Using their wings, the two siblings arrived at a big tree. Under the starlight, the aquatic flowers saw the siblings and the big black tree next to the lake. The rain saw the light and the flowers growing. The plentiful bulrushes went to sleep as the siblings' magic brought about flowers. The flowers were made to be bitten, creating a path. This is how flowers should be killed.

E:17 Magpie – Mekundo

Ge baagha-báághata zengè, súlosèt fina dèlèngómoti maazemang ranáářèfrum khogum ěkeze dehedzighus. Idzuk řodum hídzita dèlèngířidetí tsa'úsudzèt ge maazemang.

Hundrut, ha maraa dèlèngúnggiti, maazemang dèlèndzá'usrum ge 'udz èřung maazè dèghogum. Ge ambè'údz, ge maazemang ranáářèfrum dèzengè, ěkeze dèradzetak an dzinè fèngadè retsino dèngadè dèreretsínindi. Fútuuti, fèsasè fègèrezeti ěřumfè, mi dèmús dèngadè dèreretsínimak.

Ge suludz, sásota alomok súúhiri alomí'i alumekúndimakènè. Ge alobúnduti súúhiri dèzuudaa, sásota alogérezak khogum sembina, an alèhungge alèmuhumus meno. Súúhiri dèghisè dèsekénimakò ěřung élo'o maktè. Súúhiri dèdzéénimak dzíneta alobundu aloókłirum káa, an alotsa'us alohindim alořohak meese. Sásota nébiřum alugèrenzim alósrobèt khogum suu alomíkutak élo'o maktè. Lana, mi dzaatum hidze, súúhiri dèdzáá tu'uz dèhíndindi, an dèhéklíkènè buru suludz.

Ha alomíkutak rondzè élo'o maktè, mi tava maazemang dèdzaatum hundrut an gáraba dèřítsirum buru maazè. Finata dèsekèk suu dómorunè, an dèveliik tsá'usrum nim élo'o maktè. Nim alomeese, sásota alomí'i alobúnduk ondaz legre ka'a ěřung maazè. Khogum hidze dèhiri, sulos fina domok u'n káa. Ándara dómok hiri'n fina tsá'usrum. Maazemang dèhungge dèmuhun sásota alélo'o dířitak túkutèt.

Nim nanotuno, tukut dèdzaati bundo ríndrakhrum. Ambè dèlèndro otuno tukut dèlamuu dèradzėřum.

In the ancient days, the water plants watched the horsetail harvest under the star-sign of the aetosauroid. The starry sky brought about fields of horsetails. Indeed, when night fell, horsetails grew in the land by the river's end.

There, on the day of the horsetail harvest, an aetosauroid was sacrificed and a child kept the fire while it cooked. As she worked, the child's sibling sat next to her, until the sacrifice finished cooking.

In the sea, the siblings saw sea-lights, and went and spoke to them. When they entered the sea-lights' shallows, the siblings sat under a sembina-tree, but did not fall asleep. The sea-lights bit them and taught magic words to them. The sea-lights made the children able to eat wood, and they got bigger, glowed, and grew wings. The flying siblings put their heads under the water and spoke the magic words. Then, in order to become stars, the sea-lights went silent and glowed as they went out to sea.

When they said the powerful magic words, many horsetails stood upright, while bones burned in the river. The plants knew that they were being watched by the water, but they wanted to grow with the magic words. The siblings used their wings to reach a large black tree by the river. Under the stars' light, the water-plants watched them and the tree. The rain watched the lights and the growing plants. The horsetails fell asleep and the siblings' magic made strobili.

In this way, the strobili became able to be cut. That is the manner in which the strobili should be killed.

E:18 Jonathan – Sdefa

<image sdefa.png here>

Long, long ago, some bushes grew by the mouth of a river. The starry sky made the bushes grow, and the seaweed saw the bushes being harvested.

One day, two children slaughtered a cow nearby, then tended a fire and cooked it. The children saw a light in the ocean, so they walked over to it to speak to it. They arrived at the light, and then they sat below a tree. The light spoke to them, and taught them a magic word. The light changed them, making them glow, get larger, and grow wings.

The siblings put their heads into the water, and said the magic word. Then the light became silent and flew away over the ocean, and became a star.

Because of the magic word, the bushes grew. The seaweed saw this, and it wanted to grow, so the children flew away and arrived at a big black tree next to the river. By the starlight, the seaweed watched the children and the tree.

Then the children used their magic to make the bushes fall asleep and grow many berries. That is why bushes now grow edible berries.

E:19 Tethys – Kam Pirngu

Tarawa mut tinik ta, makka ti-wirum ka ti-riuni, tak tum ndauni-mang. Pambam mut tum ti-waak tammak tikki ti-mut tinik ta.

Ngam pikkar-mang, pirrak na pawanga ngguwi-mang tak ti-rum ndauni, kukkuppi kir tak pinam-mang. Pambam ti-wir na kirumbau-manngak ngam ti-ngu, akkattu, turuwa kir. Kirraak mbamanga piu-mang, kirra kinggindang ngam ri kir. Ti-wa, ti-wirummak ngangaur ti-wir na kat rundi-mang. Ti-wirrak na ikkjuma tj-ambi-wirra ngam ti-ngu, kanngam ti-wat rundi. Ti-wirummak ngam ti-ngu kunggun kirum ti-wir na, kunggun tawa kirra kappun nua pak. Tarawa kiwup ti-wirum, kir pak ka ti-ngu ri ti-rannga, nua nggarwi tiuni-mang pinam.

Ti-wattak rundi kunggun kiwup ti-mut tinik ta. Turungu ti-mut tum nua tawa ina tak ti-mut tinik. Ti-wir na pappak uppan ti-rannga, pambam pippau-manngak mbum tamut tak ti-rum ndauni. Nua ti-wirum ka ti-riuni, randamba ti-mut tum ti-wirrak na tak ti-wippak. Tuwa ti-wa, ti-wirrak na ndurnur ti-mut tinik, takkunggun tawa kirra rakki nua makka. Nua ti-wa, rakki mut tinik.

Thorn bushes grew, eating the light of the stars, alongside a river. Water plants saw someone harvesting the thorn bushes.

One day, two children killed a beast by the river, and cooked it with a fire. The children saw a light in the ocean, and went and followed it. They arrived at a tree, and sat under it. Here, the light taught the two children a magic spell. The children submerged their heads in the ocean and said the magic spell. The light made them glow, and made them grow wings for flying. Growing silent, it flew out of the ocean to the sky, to float as a burning star.

The magic spell made the thorn bushes quiet. The water plants wanted to grow like the thorn bushes. The two children flew through the sky, and saw a big black tree. Because of the light from the stars, the water plants obeyed the two children and the tree. Then the children used the spell to make the briar bushes fall asleep and grow fruit to eat. This is why briar bushes grow fruit.

E:20 Jason – Shikaiwa

Kai hakou cifik'uu p'auvai saikoko wiehaau fudha wucu. Kai uthi wau itk'icu kai hakou haau wahawazhu.

Au thaulu p'auvai, zhatha yaulho cifik'uu p'au s'aufi suthuavai saufi kakushi p'au lhafauhopai. Udhauto p'au, wie cifeava p'au yaulho itk'ifai ptayuudho ik'oshu. Wie yaulho wiishet'au ptayazhu p'au yaulho wiishet'ie k'auvai. Taidu p'auvai wie kai yiihi sauwa yalhoshi ptethayawai yaulho auzho paavai.

Yaulho zhasit'oko fuo cifet'ie t'aava zhkusizhu p'au s'auwa pteyadawai. Wie cifeko p'au yaulho pzhuuka yaulho husa yaulhoshi t'ipiodhau yaulho t'ipiot'au p'auvai pthukilo. Wie faisha cifeyuti uuzhivai k'aucushu aavaka shkusiwai saiko husa paulho.

Shiihi sauwa kakou waciu kakou faishafai huthi wau kakousko vu k'icis'o. Yaulho aavaka p'auvai pthuki ik'oshu cifik'uu aka shiili wiishe p'au itk'ifai. Saikoko wie p'au wiishe p'auvai huthi wau yaulho palhuucu. Yaulho kakou waciu wacuuka kakou kawo wacuuka ciiya kakoushi vu haau si p'auvai.

T'aata p'auvai k'akou ciiyaayalha

Cacti grew near a river, feeding on starlight. Water plants watched as the cacti were harvested.

One day, some children killed an animal by the river and cooked it over a fire. Afterward they saw a light over the sea, and they went after it.

It led them to a tree, and they sat beneath it. There, the light taught them a magic spell.

The children dipped their heads beneath the sea and spoke the spell. The light in the sea made the children glow and gave them wings so they could fly. The light grew calm, then rose from the sea into the sky, to be burning stars.

The spell soothed the cacti, but the water plants longed to grow like cacti. The children flew through the sky and saw a great dark tree beside the river. Because of the starlight, the water plants listened to the children there at the tree. Then the children put the cacti to sleep and made them grow fruit to be eaten.

And ever since, cacti bear fruit.